His Last Swim.

Buffalo, July 24 .- Captain Matthew Webb, the noted English swimmer, perished in the attempt to swim the Niagara river whirlpool rapids this afternoon. He was rowed in a skiff to a point in the river opposite the old Maid of the Mist landing by THE following persons have been commissioned John McClay, the ferryman at the falls, and leaped from the boat at two minutes past four o'clock. The daring swimmer passed the big rapids all right keeping the middle of the stream. When he struck the whirlpool he was rushed to the American side where waves, it is estimated, are from thirty to forty feet high. The last seen of him he was throwing up one arm. His intention had been to pass the whirlpool on the Canada side. His shoot of the rapids was extremely thrilling. The refusal of the railroads and hotels to have anything to do with what they termed "his going to his death' rendered the affair financially a failure. The river has been searched for two miles below the whirlpool, but no trace of Webb has been found. It is generally believed that he was engulfed in the whirlpool. Webb leaves a wife and two children in England. He was watched by people in carriages but they could not get ahead of him. Fred Kyle, manager for Captain Webb, has arrived from the falls, and gives up all hope of his safety .- S. F. J. Kala Morning Call.

FRANCE AND CHINA.

Enthusiasm for Toukin has wonderfully diminished since it has become possible the Black Pirates would have the Chinese at their backs, and a war with China and closing her ports might involve complications with other nations. Then again it is felt the Foreign Minister has not stated the whole case, that he has been pre-The regular summer vacation of seven weeks of cipitate in repudiating the negotiations, and anall public schools throughout the Kingdom, will nouncing his intention to annex Annam. The extend from Friday, the 27th of July inst. to Monextreme left taking advantage of the altered curday the 17th of September next, on which date a rent of opinion intend to provoke a grand Tonkin'debate. This will be useless, unless a yellow book be published. France will, since she must, avenge the massacre of Riviere and his garrison; that accomplished. Tonkin will be abandoned as heretofore. Ecance on reflection cannot see the advantages for spending millions During my absence from the Island, the Honorable A. S. Cleghorn will act for me as Governor of of money and sacrificing hundreds of fives.

Though the government withholds the publication of the dispatches, it is accepted that Commandant (Riviere did not fall in a sortie, but that he was defeated while endeavoring to march into the bowels of the land, when the Annamites were able to select their moment of attack. The natives display no desire to be annexed, but to continue tributary to China, as the latter claims they have been since IS00 years. In Pallee's work on the Auuamites, he states the men never have beards till 30 au l far from resembling, the pard, such is limited to a few hairs on the upper lip and chin. The women and men dress nearly alike, blouse and pantaloons; the latter when in four colors is preferred by coquettes. The ladies have a childish beauty, and in addition to the usual parts of the body for wearing jewelry, exhibit such on their toes. The inhabitants display more care on their sepalchres which are painted in lilac and rose, than on their homes which are sombre. But then they pass a good deal of their life in gondolas,

THE ANNAMITES. The Aunamites love gambling, dislike commerce, and only cultivate the ground to meet home wants. They are not naturally warlike, but if one of their chiefs be slain, they open his body, extract the heart, and devour it warm and palpitating to inherit his courage. Crime is not extensive; the most terrible is against the Euperor. The accused for this is cut up into an hundred morsels, the fragments put into a jar, and placed before his own door. Marriage and death are the two important events in the life of Ms. S. MANUEL SYLVA is this day appointed Agent | the people; then the poorest is at liberty to wear silks, fancy patterns, and long robes, like a mandarin, and if the latter encounters a wedding or funeral procession, he descends from his elephant or horse, as a mark of respect. It is in the villages national life concentrates; only the Emperor, or by his order, can any person forcibly enter a cottage, constructed of dwarf palms. In the contrary case the women are free lo lynch the intruders.

THE NEW SUEZ CANAL.

I am informed that the accord between the Suez company and the English Government is not as rose-colored as M. de Lesseps lately depicted it. The Euglish Cabinet is not prepared to dispute de Lessep's concession to cut canals across the isthmus, but it claims for the Khedive the right to declare when a second canal is necessary, to compel de Lesseps to make it within a fixed date, and following conditions in accordance with the spirit of the times. These latter imply cheaper tariffs and an exclusive administration. Failing compliance, the Khedive can make the canal in his own name. M. de Lesseps wants the canal to always possess a French trademark so as to perpetuate the glory of his country. In all combinations he insists on France having the casting vote at the council board. In the way of concession, the negotiatos offer to make him President for his life. Many shrewd people think the solution lies in buying up the company. Commercially, that in the end would pay.

COMTE DE CHAMBORD.

Only think of the Comte de Chambord being interviewed by a red-hot republican, of the Evenement, who paid a visit to Froshdorf on his return from Moscow. The result leaves a favorable impression of Henri V, who leads anything but a regal life. The house is full of invaluable royal souvenirs, such as the famous helmet and black plumes, for he employed that color as well as white, of Henri IV; the portrait of Marie Autoinette, by Mme Lebrun, the best existing, and bearing the marks of bayonet thrusts and balls of the revolutionists of 1830. The Comte is small rather in statue, corpulent and with little legs: he has a Byron halt. His bust is very elegant, his manners most pleasing and gay. His hair commences to turn gray. He is a veritable Nimrod, rents an extensive tract of country and never hunts the same game a second time in the

M. DE GREVY.

Having nothing more serious on hand, the ournals have opened a campaign against M. Grevy's alleged parsimony. He is lodged in a palace, the state paying all household expenses save his board. His salary is 600,000 fr. a year, plus 300,000 fr. for receptions, and 300,000 fr. for travelling. As he never travels, he is called upon to return this sum to the treasury that now stands in need of the smallest contribution. M. Grevy is charged with usver subscribing to a charity or investing a franc in a picture or a statue. Byron states, Pitt rained Great Britain gratis, and poor Macmahon was fooled into ruining himself and his relatives while in office.

ing itself up. France is in a brown study as to the why and the wherefore, she is elbowed out of the foreign markets, and combatted successfully in her own by the stranger; why thousands of Italians, Belgiaus, Germans and Spaniar ds invade her several industries and execute her public works; why her carrying trade is in the hands of foreigners and her colonies remain but at the dead level of military possessions.

The last idea of people having money here is to invest it, save for a few months. Industrial or commercial ventures are taboosal. Scrip transactions are apparently limited to giving change for bank notes. There is a glut of property in the market; palatial residences in the neighborhood of the Parc Monceaux cannot be let even at a reduction of fifty per cent, so proprietors have to convert them into small apartments at moderate rents. If the Municipal Council has but common patience, there will be no necessity of levelling the fortifications at an expense of 26,000,000 frs. to provide sites for houses for the working classes-the latter will have all the West End before them to choose,

THE PORT BRETON TRIAL.

The Port Breton trial has commenced, will continue for a fortnight and will rank among the causes celebres. In 1877, an adventurer, the Marquis de Rays, then aged 43, and belonging to an old family in Bretagne, started an emigration project for a free colony at Port Breton, in the vicinity of New Caledonia. The price of share, which gave a title to several acres of land. was 5 fr. payable in five monthly installments of 1 fr. The colony was to be at once royalist and pious, lectures were given, the society had a journal. French, Belgian, Spanish, etc., applicants poured in. From 1879 to 1889 four vessels were chartered. The emigrants were mostly the riffraff of towns, the provisious proved to be rotten, the passengers and crews deserted wherever the ships touched, sickness carried off others, and at Port Breton, where a few arrived and lived like savages, death laid nearly all low, 60 at least. Five of the Robinson Crusoes were rescued by a missionary vessel. The Marquis who conferred titles of Comte, etc., on his associates, concealed himself in Spain, but has been extradited and is charged, with some others, with swindling, homicide, and violation of the emi-SUNDAY LABOR.

This summer witnesses still further progress n the cessation of Sunday labor; more shops are closed and there is a diminution in business street traffic. Though Sunday be a legal holiday in France, every citizen is allowed to work if he pleases, save apprentices who are prohibited. The police can prevent any unnecessary trading and the exposure of goods in the highways for sale, on Sundays, the penalty for resisting being a fine of 5 to 15 fr. and 15 days imprisonment. APPRENTICES.

Respecting apprentices, there is a round robbin opposition against increasing their number, on the part of journeymen. The temple of Ephesus appears to be in danger. Formerly each trade had its fixed number of apprentices, the period of service, generally five years, varied however in each city and for each trade. Indentures at present appear unnecessary, as the number of apprentices in Paris is set down at 20,000 of which only 5,000 are articled. By law a master cannot have an apprentice unless he be 21 years of age and of good morality. If a bachelor or widower he is prohibited from taking female apprentices. If the apprentice be under 16 years of age he must be allowed two hours daily to go to school. The master cannot employ him as a servant and is responsible for his moral conduct. The first two months are accorded as a trial at the conclusion of which either party can cancel the indentures.

LUNATIC ASYLUMS.

The lunatic asylums in France cannot be Bastiles. I am aware of a gentleman who has had to place recently a relative in that at Charenton, where the price varies from 1,500, 1,000 to 900 fr. a year. Any relative can visit the patient every Sunday and Thursday, and the Prefect can order his release despite doctors and friends. Nay more a patient can write when he pleases to one of the Judges, demanding his liberation and the letter must be forwarded, under penalty of imprisonment if the directors or keepers refuse. The regular soldiers objected to shoot Marshal

Ney, so fanatical volunteers were obtained and dressed up in uniform, who did the work. At Bordeaux the heat is so powerful that sun strokes are very prevalent. At Marseilles a citizen boasts the heat is such that people die of

'moon" strokes. Two friends, -"When last I saw you, 20 years ago, you were quite bald, and now your hair is not a bit thinner."

Pro Patria.

Hawaiians generally will be pleased to learn that there is one man at least in the community who cares for their amusements and interests, and that man is Mr. W. G. Irwin, who on Saturday purchased the Music Hall in order that it might not pass into other hands and be utilized for other purposes than that for which it was built. Mr. Irwin considers that with the fortnightly communication to and from the coast it will be necessary to have some regular amusement for the increased number of visitors to Honolulu, and, in his hands. everybody will feel confident that our amusements will be both better and more frequent than in the past; it can only be hoped that this new investment may prove remunerative to the pur-

Sisters of Charity. People will rejoice to learn that Father Leonor has been successful in his important mission, and, that a band of the noble Sisters of Charity, thoroughly trained in hospital nursing and practice. will be shortly on their way to the islands.
